Dear Chairmen Roberts and Conaway and Ranking Members Stabenow and Peterson,

We, the undersigned agriculture and rural organizations representing millions of members across the country, thank you for your leadership on behalf of America's farm families and we strongly urge you to reauthorize the Farm and Ranch Stress Assistance Network (FRSAN) with adequate funding in the next farm bill.

Farming is a high-stress occupation. Financial risk, volatile markets, unpredictable weather, and heavy workloads can all place a significant strain on a farmer or rancher's mental and emotional well-being. A 2016 study by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention revealed that farmers had a much higher rate of suicide than any other occupation.¹ This is exacerbated by the fact that 60 percent of rural residents live in areas that suffer from mental health professional shortages.²

Due to the prolonged downturn in the farm economy, many farmers are facing even greater stress. Net farm income has dropped by more than 50 percent since 2013, and current projections indicate the rebound could be years away. In fact, the Economic Research Service recently forecast net farm income to drop another 6.7 percent in 2018, its lowest level since 2006. As Congress works to pass a new farm bill, it's critical that farmers and ranchers are given the resources they need, including a strong network of support.

The 2008 Farm Bill established FRSAN to provide grants to extension services and nonprofit organizations that offer stress assistance programs to individuals engaged in farming, ranching, and other agriculture-related occupations. Eligible programs include farm helplines and websites, community outreach and education, support groups, and home delivery of assistance. Despite the growing need, FRSSAN has never received funding, leaving many producers without access to important behavioral health services.

We urge you to reauthorize FRSSAN in the next farm bill and to provide funding necessary to meet the needs of farmers and ranchers as they endure increasing financial, mental, and emotional stress.
